

Grayson Cox

Dual Credit English 101

Mrs. Beevers

29 January 2026

Writer's Notebook Task 7

1. Nate Kreuters's essay on writing is about the processes of writing and everything that goes into writing. He says that writing is more than just applying to the reader and it is more than just getting your work published. Writing is the use of the mind and the hands. It creates an environment that promotes growth and it promotes the ability to be a free thinker. His message is that writing should not be seen as some type of work but more of an experience that everyone can gain from. His thoughts are here to promote the ideas of writing and says that it will help strengthen the mind and thoughts. Along with all of this writing is just a good skill to have because no matter what you get into at some point in your life you will have to write. Regardless if you are an engineer or doctor or line worker there will come a time to write and having this skill is vital in today's world.

2. Dr. Russell Johnson writes to his students saying that they will miss out on vital information and learning processes. He believes that writing is a process that will require setbacks and mistakes so that students can learn. His ideas are in the writing that using AI like chatbot takes away from the writing processes because it takes away from the processes of learning how to write and getting thoughts onto paper. Using Ai makes students only have a surface level understanding of a topic at that or worse students may not even understand what they wrote about or had chat gpt write about because they never took the time to try to understand the topic. It also shows that it hurts the students because it gets rid of the students ability to think and makes them not want to learn when they can just take the easy way and get the answers much faster with the use of AI.

3. Both of these authors would agree that the skill of writing is vital to all students due to the fact that it strengthens the brain and it makes the students better one work at a time. Nate Kreuter states “ This is the strength of writing, not its liability. We make new connections and learn what we want to say” What he is saying in this statement is that students and writers alike need to write because it helps not only spread our idea but it also helps us form how we think. If we have someone or something else write for us it limits us and our minds so that we cannot think for ourselves and puts a lock on our mind. Similar to what Nate Kreuter states Dr. Russell Johnson says “ The reason that I insist you do your writing assignments is that they give you valuable practice discovering insights and communicating them to others”. His statement here aligns perfectly with what Nate Kreuter had said in his writing. If students do not do their writing they will not gain anything and will limit no one but themselves. This is one thing that I believe that they would both agree on: that students will only hurt themselves from not writing their own work because they will limit themselves and their abilities.
4. Both of these authors have solidified my belief that students should do their own work. I believe that learning is very important to all students and that they will need these abilities that reading provides for them. These two authors state that students will learn so much for themselves when they write because writing allows for students to make mistakes that they can learn from. These mistakes are not mistakes but instead learning opportunities for students. They allow students to grow and to become better for themselves. When a student writes they practice putting their thoughts in a way that they can share with the world and it allows for them to be able to share what they think in a respectful manner and allows for them to get their ideas out so that they will be heard and received well from students. These are the reason why that these authors solidify my ideas and beliefs.